Representation, and Politics of the Rousseauism

By Karl Marx (1871)

Table of Contents

I. Production Process
II. Material Facts
III. Facts and Processes
IV. Representation as Art of Representation from the will of the people – will of the people represents as in fact – what is a people and even in fact French Jacobin ways, something like how the political fact is then an outright fact. Only the political fact.
V. Representation of the proletariat – the process described from the proletarian standpoint like the process of the proletariat in Spain and France and even in the peasant section of France.
VI. Communist Party as Correct
VII. Logic and Literature and its problem of representation
VIII. Complexity or simplicity – What is the process of representation in the mind except for in fact living with the proletariat, which means following the people and the proletariat and only following the working class news. I mean in fact the militant.

I. Rousseauists

When it is about the people and the general will and that my own life is given to the will of the people. And that representation is then in French radicalism, only the radical politics.

II. Marxism

More complex about the problem of the people, Marxists add music, symphony, jazz and literary criticism, such things.

III. Philosophy and Hegel

Hegel then is about the process of representation alone. An idealist.

Engels edit this.

Freidrich Engels

I. Philosophy as Politics
II. Materialism as Categories which are Material Categories.
III. Communism as Brumiare of the proletariat.